Dying for a Drink? Hey, it's 5 o'clock somewhere

Crazy Farquhar $24

For close to three years, this island was a hub for the opium trade, and for that we have to thank the first Commandant of Colonial Singapore William Farquhar. Give a toast to his memory with this equally colourful drink, made with Brazilian Leblon Cachaca, passionfruit, blueberries and vanilla.

Sentosa Beach Party $22

Fizzy and fun, you can drink this sun up to sun down. Gin is infused with fresh ginger and lemongrass for 24 hours, then muddled with mint and the refreshing local favourite calamansi. Drink up, and plan your next beach getaway.

Black Gold $20

Like a mysterious stranger you're immediately drawn to at a bar, you'll want a taste of this cocktail made with fresh pressed charred pineapple juice, Plantation Dark Rum, lime, salt, charcoal, and Chartreuse Elixir Vegetal. As the Japanese say, shibui.

Bandung $22

Arriving in the Malay Archipelago by way of India, Rose Milk is a cherished local favourite, and its name Bandung literally means 'pair'. Indian Rose Tea is paired with gin instead of milk, and shaken with vanilla, citrus and egg white. Savour in pairs to get into the spirit of the thing.

Spice Road $23

The modern story of Singapore began with the spice trade, and we've channelled our history into this richly layered cocktail. Atop a foundation of five different spices, comes whiskey, crème de cacao and a dash of bitters.

Green Corridor $20

Our ode to the pretty tree-lined streets of home and bright future as the artistic hub of the region. Gin is blended with kiwi juice, Uji Matcha power and a few shakes of absinthe for good measure. May the Green Fairy grant you inspiration always.

Tamarind Hill $20

Here in Singapore, tamarind is said to cure everything from digestive problems to hangovers, so you'll need a few of these. We've extracted, boiled, mashed, and strained tamarind to get that sweet-sour flavour, then enhanced with Tequila, Cointreau, and a hint of vanilla.

'Musth' Mahout $22

This blend of lemongrass, ginger, lychee and gin will get you feeling like when a male elephant loses the plot 'cause his babe wants to get jiggy. We did warn you...
